THE CAMDEN ART COLLECTION

The artworks in GALLERY II, III and IV are from the Camden Art Collection. This collection is made up of over 200 artworks acquired over 46 years, including paintings, works on paper, sculpture, and photo media. The works featured include acquisitive Camden Art Prize winners and gifted works from 1975 to 1987.

Camden Art Prize was established in 1974 as an exhibition to create a Camden Art Collection. Initiated by Bob Baker and Bruce Ferguson, the two joined with fellow art enthusiasts to form the volunteer Camden Festival of Art Exhibition Committee. With sponsorship from local businesses and individuals, the support of Camden Municipal Council, and a grant from the Australia Council of the Arts, the inaugural Exhibition was held in 1975. Celebrated as part of the Camden Festival of Art, in conjunction with the popular Hospital Carnival Fete the Camden Art Prize remains as an annual event. The exhibition was opened by Bruce le Compte,

Director of the Visual Arts Board with Alan D. Baker, Alan Hansen and Margot Lewes the first category judges for the prize.

Celebrating years of success the Festival Exhibition in 1982 became the Camden Municipal Art Exhibition, then in 1985, officially named the Camden Art Prize. Over the years many notable people have opened the exhibition including then Premier Neville Wran, celebrated artist Lloyd Rees, Alan D. Baker, former Camden Mayor Liz Kernohan, Lady Mary Fairfax, Bruce Ferguson, James Mollison, then Director of the National Art Gallery Canberra, and John Bell, who would go on to establish the Bell Shakespeare Company. The collection hosts artwork by notable artists like Elisabeth Cummings, Suzanne Archer, Bob Baker, Janet Dawson, Michael Johnson, Lesley Dumbrell and many more, the Camden Art Prize has certainly fulfilled its early mission to create a rich collection of art for Camden's community.
